課程大綱
China & the Transformation of Global Capitalism June 2013 National Tsing Hua University, Taiwan Instructor: Prof. Ho-fung HUNG (Johns Hopkins University) E-mail: hofung@jhu.edu Overview The course introduces students to the background, dynamics, and impact of the rise of China as an economic powerhouse and a significant geopolitical actor in historical and global perspectives. The course will pay particular attention to the historical origins of China's economic miracle, socio-political crises unleashed by the miracle, and the global impact of the rise of China. The lectures are divided into three parts. Part A introduces the historical background and process of the contemporary rise of China; part B deals with the global impact of China's economic ascendancy. Requirements Students are required to attend all classes and finish all assigned readings. When doing the readings, you should pay particularly close attention to the parts that I emphasize in class. You are encouraged to raise questions and participate in class discussion. Needs arising from documented disabilities will be accommodated, but you have to discuss it with me within the first week of class. Evaluation of students' performance is based on: Attendance (20%) In-Class presentation (30%): 1-2 students could pick a specific issue related to any topic of the class to make a 15-20 minutes presentation on either June 12 or June 13 Final paper (50%): write-up of the class presentation into a paper of 10-20 pages or more Class Schedule 1.
